In some parts of the movie, it was even better than the first time I saw it. I especially enjoyed the riotous hilarity in the opening scenes of the High School Musical movies. For example, I like when the grumpy principal turns into a huge ball of laughs when he realizes he's sitting next to the prom queen in the ballroom. That is great and funny. There are other humorous moments like this, but I don't want to give the film more stars because the movie as a whole doesn't live up to the first movie. The performances were good. The actors in this movie play some of their characters very well. The actors are good at portraying the various characters within the movie. The actors do a good job keeping the movie going at a fast pace. A few of the actors are even able to emote (their faces sometimes match what they are saying) quite well. Unfortunately, the performances of the actors within the movie are not so good. They play the characters too much like in an adult movie. The actors are able to emote like in an adult movie, but they are very stiff. I remember that these actors could be a little more emotional because of the fact that they are acting like children. For example, they don't make eye contact with each other as they are supposed to, they speak more loudly than is needed, they play their roles in very stiff fashion, etc. A few of the actors have some wacky characterizations in the movie. I think the actors are having fun playing around with the wacky characterizations. Sometimes, their wacky characterizations are not to the point of making the movie not watchable. The cartoon-looking costumes are good. The costumes of the actors and the teens of the movie are good. However, some of the kids' costumes are not as good as the others. The costumes on some of the kids' characters look like they are from The Dukes of Hazzard. In that movie, The Dukes of Hazzard lived in a school. It's called "The Boss Hogg Academy". If the studio wanted to make an animated movie that had some of the characters living in a school, they could have done that. They didn't have to animate a bunch of kids wearing 80s hair styles in 80s fashion to look like they're in school. A few of the characters in the movie are dressed like they are too old to be teenagers.

This is not an issue for me. I don't think the actors did a good 82157476af
